THE KIND TURKEY-MAN.

A Thanksgiving Story.

It was the evening before Thanks-The sun had gone down behind the hills of Greenville, leaving them cold and bare against the dull sky. The squirrels were safe and warm in their own little houses, cracking nuts for their Thanksgiving dinner. The trees waved their tall, bare branches in the bitter cold but they knew that their roots were sheltered by the kind earth. The cold winter shouted a merry "good-evening" to everything, as he rushed over the frozen ground.

He raced over the bare hills; the squirrels drew closer together, and exulted over their crowded storehouse; the trees bowed a stately good-night, as he whisked away; but he calmed down as he met a little figure on the frozen road, and gave her time to draw her faded cloak tighter over her blue hands, before he rushed on again.

A wagon was heard. "Rattle, rattle!" Even the wagon is cold, the child thought, as she heard the loose spokes rattling in the wheels.

She stepped aside for the wagon to pass; the driver h pleasant-looking man, stopped his horses, and asked her whether she was going.

"To the city," answered the child. "To the city!" cried the man.
"Why, you will never get there, unless you are blown there, or I take you."

"Will you take me!" she asked, not eagerly, but like one accustomed to re-

His answer was to reach down his hand to help her up.

"Now," said he, as he put her under the heavy buffalo robe, "what's your name?"

"Mary-only Mary," she answered

"Mary," said the man, softly, more to himself than to the child, "I wish it hadn't been that."

"Why, there's lots of Marys," said the child.

"Yes, I know it," he said. I had a little Mary last Thanksgiving. I—I don't like to see any one named Mary in trouble.'

"I ain't crying," said the child, smil-ing, "because I'm in trouble, but 'cause I'm so cold. I ought to have trouble, Granny says."
"Ought to have trouble, hey!" said the man, stopping his horse, and drawing from under the buffalo robe a can of hot coffee. "That hasn't been off the stove more than five minutes," he said, as he filled a little tin cup and handed it to her "Take that, and drink to your

"Oh, don't!" exclaimed the child: "cos it makes turkey cost so much, poor folks can't have any."

"Don't you care anything for me!" cried the man, pathetically; "here's my wagon full of turkeys."

"She is Granny Cole's daughter." "Did Granny Cole send you alone to the city?" said he, watching her suspiciously.

"She told me the other day," said the child, mournfully, "if I ever come home and found her gone, to go to the city and find my cousin. Yesterday she sent me off with Sally, an' when I come back Sally ran away from me, an' I couldn't find Granny."

"I know the city best," she said ; "Granny used to live there, till a week ago. It is so dark in the country, when you have to stay alone! There are the market-men-see how bright they are!" It was the night before Thanksgiving, in the city as well as in the country; the markets shone as they always do the evening before the great feast. Never were garlands more green, never apples more red, or gobblers more plump.

The turkey man drove up and stop-and he entered the market. The market-men beamed on everybody. They rubbed their hands as customer after customer vanished with the cold form of some kind of fowl neatly covered, all but its feet, in brown paper. It was growing late; the turkey-man had sold out; he waited only to get a hot supper before starting for home, He had been thinking entirely of dollars and cents; but as he walked out of the market he thought of his home, his wife waiting alone for him in the great white house, and his little Mary safe in God's she sobbed. "But I'm so hungry!" and she fell against the barrel. The stars were shining cold and clear.

Illegitimacy in Scotland.

Illegitimacy in Scotland has attained an extent that will surprise those who popularly contrast Continental profligacy in such cities as Vienna and Paris with continent Puritanism in the land of Knox. According to the last annual report of the Scotch registrar-general the number of illegitimate births during the past year was 11,077, or 91 per cent. of the total number—a number sufficiently large, though the percentage is the smallest recorded for ten years. A CALIFORNIA SNOW STORM.

A. Picture Drawn by Bret Harte in a Most Interesting Manner.

Bret Harte in his new novel in Scribner's Monthly paints a graphic picture of a California show storm: Snow. Everywhere. As far as the eye could the walls of the canyons in white shroudlike drifts, fashioning the dividing "You did right, John," said his wife; ridge into the likeness of a monstrous grave, shiding the bases of giant pines, With these words, the woman-good, and completely covering young trees lying everywhere over the California Sierras on the 15th day of March, 1848,

The strongest gust, the fiercest blast awoke no sigh or complaint from the snowpacked, rigid files of forest. There was no cracking of bough nor crackle of underbrush; the overladen branches of pine and fir yielded and gave way without a sound. The silence was vast.

measureless, complete! Nor could it be said that any outward sign of life or motion changed the fixed outlines of this stricken landscape. Above, there was no play of light and shadow, only the occasional deepening of storm or night. Below, no bird winged its flight across the white exlands. There was no track or imprint whatever foot might have left its mark upon this waste, each succeeding snowfall obliterated all trace or record. Every morning the solitude was virgin and unbroken; a million tiny feet had stepped into the track and filled it up. And yet, in the center of this desolation, in the very stronghold of this grim fortress, there was the mark of human

A Terrible Plot.

A case in Lincoln, Ont., illustrates the liability of courts and juries to cruel mistake. A few months since Mathias Konkle was found guilty of felonious assault upon a female child of ten years of age. He was convicted and sentenced to be hanged, but the sentence was afterward commuted to imprisonment our listener. "Why, that wasn't much for life. It now appears that there was a conspiracy to get rid of Konkle, in which his stepmother was the principal mover, her motive being to obtain possession of property. She took into her confidence the grandmother of the little girl, and a servant. These together arranged the plot against Kookle, the child being brutelly maltreated to furnish evidence against an innocent man. At the trial Mrs. Konkle "posted" all the rural districts the rate of illegitimacy rises to 11.4 per cent. The fact

Mr. Murray, in this week's Golden Rule, lectures the clergymen who run the Temperance Alliance, for bringing into their councils the clap-trap of the average politician. Clergymen meetng in council as citizens, and conducting their deliberations gravely and prayerfully, he thinks, would exert a powerful and needed influence on our current politics. "But clergymen who adopt the manner and style of the partisan, and whose excellence of management scens to be only in beating the average politician with his own weapons, exert no influence on the mass of their fellow citizens, and barely save themselves and their cause from public contempt." Mr. Murray has the right idea; and it is singular that his brothers of the cloth whom he rebukes, cannot see their mistake as others see it.

Mr. John Schouler, of Arlington, is the Democratic nonlinee for County Commissioner in Middlesex County. In his letter of acceptance he says:

MR. EDITOR. - In your last issue you gave a brief account of a new movement of the judustrious young mechanics of Boston and vicinity to obtain one or two hundred agres of land in the vicinity of the metropolis, on which they propose to erect two hundred or more houses, suited to their convenience and that of their young families.

We understand that they have visited among them the land lying east of the reservoir in this town, and with this they are generally pleased, or such of the committee as have examined it.

We can say to these gentlemen that the land in question is of good quality. the old folks grow sleepy at an early high and salubrious, and very fine in prospect, having the reservoir constantly in view. Smart Weed for Tanning.

A writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is enthusiastic over the discovery that a variety of the smart weed which grows wild in Missouri in such profusion as to be a nuisance, surpasses bark in its tanning qualities. As its only cost is that resulting from the labor of cutting and stacking it, say $5 a ton, while bark costs in that State $112 per ton, it is argued that hereafter millions of hides will annually be made into leather in the West instead of being sent to the Eastern States to be tanned, which involves the expense of transportation both ways for the leather consumed in the West, besides paying the Eastern capitalists and mechanics for work which could just as well be done at home. It is said that this plant yields at least ten per cent. of tannic acid—an analysis by the Nebraska State chemist gives nearly twenty-two per cent. from the root and seventeen to nineteen per cent. from the plant—bemlock and oak bark yielding from eleven to thirteen per cent. But even if the results stated by the Nebraska chemist are correct, it does not follow that this weed will make as good leather as bark. There are peculiar properties for making good leather found in bark that, so far as is generally known, have never been equaled in any other material. More or less sannic acid is found in almost every plant that grows, and in some the percentage of tannin is as high as from forty-four to fifty per cent. Yet the leather produced by the use of these plants has never come into favor, and that made from some of them is bad in color.

Few people unacquainted with physiological chemistry are aware of the quantity of iron in the blood, but all should know the importance of keeping up the supply, for debility, disease and death are sure to follow when the quantity becomes too much reduced. The Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of ircn) supplies this vital element, and has cured many chronic diseases.— 7000.

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia are the causes of two-thirds of the cases of Comsumption. Many persons complain of a dull pain in the side, constipation, coated tongue, pain in the shoulder-blade, fedlings of drowsiness and restlessness, the food lying heavily on the stomach, accompanied with scidity and belowing up of wind.

These symptoms usually originate from a disordered condition of the stomach or a torpid liver.

Persons so affected, if they take one or two heavy coids, and if the cough in these cases be suddenly checked, will find the stomach and liver clagged, remaining torpid and inactive, and almost before they are aware the lungs are a mass of sores, and ulcerated, the result of which is death.
